

ABSTRACT

Compositions with pH-dependent modified release are described, consisting of hydrogel matrices containing one or more active ingredients, in which said matrices are suitable for releasing said active ingredients in a prolonged manner in given sites of the body.